

Trans-atlantic Collaboration Announcement

For several years, the American Aging Association and the British Society for Research on Ageing have been working together to encourage trans-Atlantic awareness and collaboration in ageing-related research. These activities will shift into a higher gear at this year's meeting.

The two societies are actively facilitating collaborative links by seeking to partner US & UK laboratories which have similar research interests. It is our expectation that this will allow us to help you identify potential funding routes by which such collaborations may be facilitated.

So, if you are a US laboratory looking for a partner in the United Kingdom (or vice versa) Please contact us and be placed on our database.

Still interested? then please contact Dr Nicky Hewson (n.hewson@brighton.ac.uk) for further details.
